INTRO

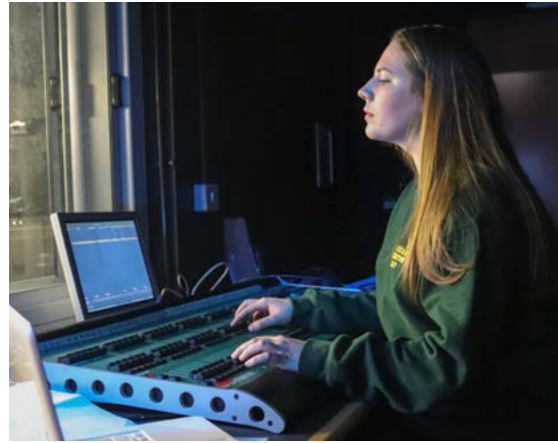

Studying with us means making creative work, and making work which matters.

You'll gain the technical expertise needed to transform your ideas into practice, and the critical skills needed to respond to the work of others. You'll learn about career development in the creative industries. You'll explore what it means to collaborate, to develop, to problem solve, and to push boundaries.

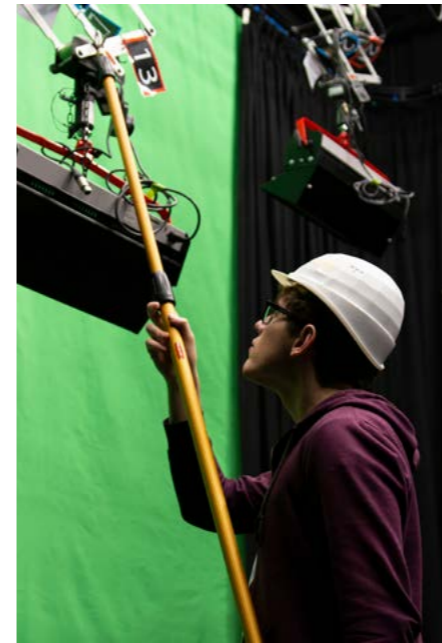

And you'll leave with first-hand experience of working on a range of creative projects.

Dr Simone Knox
Head of Film, Theatre & Television

WHAT WOULD YOU MAKE HERE?

MAKE WORK WHICH MATTERS

Film, theatre and television shape the world around us, and have the power to change minds. With us, you'll explore their social impact, cultural legacies, and possible futures – and learn to develop your own creative confidence and practical skills.

The Department of Film, Theatre & Television brings together cutting-edge academics, industry professionals and a dedicated team of technicians. Here, you'll study a diverse and international range of work, from popular entertainment to radical creative experiments. And you'll gain the know-how needed to find your own place and voice in the creative arts.

In Minghella Studios we have created an environment where critical thinking and creative development work together. It's a bright, open and flexible collection of spaces; a study environment to enable and inspire.

Minghella Studios is the purpose-built home of the Department of Film, Theatre & Television. The creative spaces here are designed for collaboration and exploration - through practical workshops, rehearsals and development. Every year, staff and students work together to host festivals at Minghella Studios, showcasing your work.

Each subject has its own specialised production areas, but all spaces are multifunctional, embodying the Department's approach to working across film, theatre and television. And because of the small group sizes in our practice modules, you'll get lots of hands-on time with our equipment.

- Three flexible theatre spaces all licensed for public performance; one 100 seat, one 75 seat and one experimental studio for alternative staging
- A digital cinema auditorium with raked seating, high definition production and 7.1 surround sound

- Dedicated sound-recording studio and mixing suites
- LED lighting in all theatre spaces
- Film and television studio with flexible lighting system, multi-camera facilities, a 'talk-back' system and green screen
- Prop, costume and furniture stores
- A suite of editing rooms
- Training in a range of equipment and software, with the support of specialised technicians.

Our department proudly subscribes to the industry-leading BAFTA albert scheme, which supports film-and-television makers in their efforts to work sustainably and to limit their environmental impact.

IDEAS WHICH MATTER

Studying here means working with experts active in cutting-edge academic research and practice. You'll learn key ideas for understanding the techniques and processes which shape film, theatre and television today.

Our teaching responds to current technological and artistic developments, including digital cinema, digital television platforms and mixed-media performance. You'll be challenged to think about how the issues you care about are being represented and communicated.

Throughout the degree, you'll learn how to create, engage and influence audiences. You'll respond to contemporary concerns - such as identity, environmental politics, conflict and migration – and your work here will help shape your identity as an empathic, risk-taking, collaborative practitioner.

Studying with experts across the breadth of film, theatre and television will mean learning about areas such as:

- Contemporary theatre and performance
- Radical theatre practices
- Ensemble performance
- Community and applied performance
- Shakespeare in performance
- Digital cinema and special effects
- Feminist screen media
- Documentary
- Global film and television
- Film style
- Ecoscenography, location and environment
- Comedy
- Acting
- Decolonization
- Scriptwriting

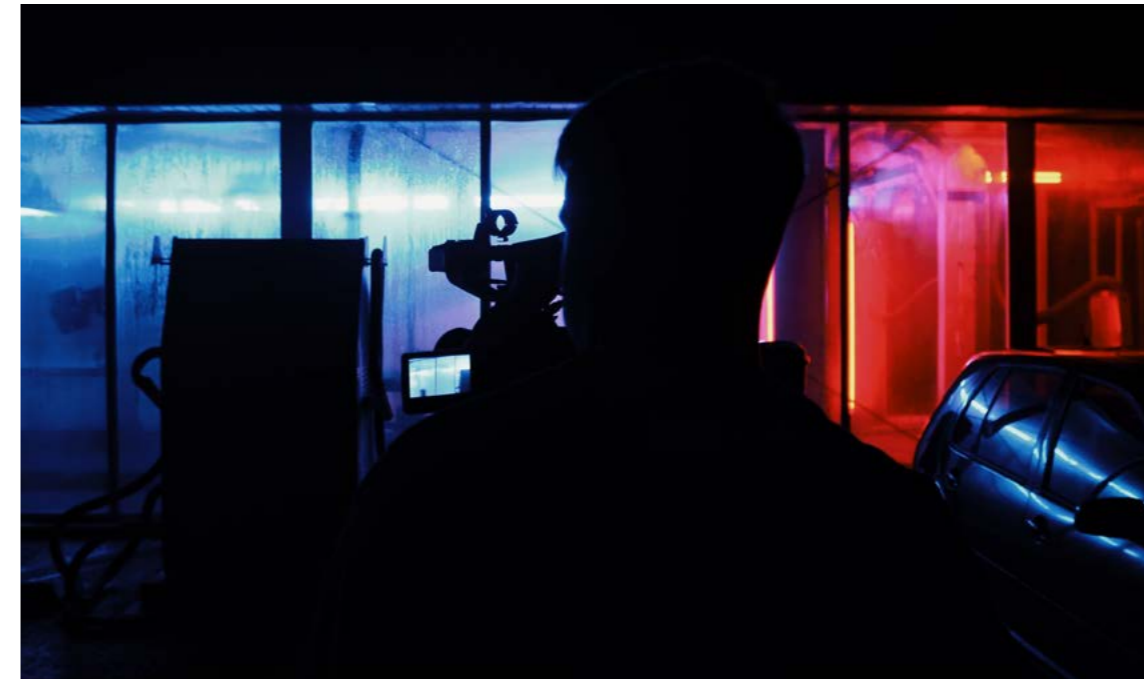

MAKING THEATRE AND PERFORMANCE

Practical experience runs throughout our theatre teaching. Thinking and doing are integrated into the work you will be doing on this programme and our students develop a range of technical and collaborative skills – such as design, scriptwriting, directing and acting – as they explore subjects and ideas through theatre visits, workshops, seminars and rehearsals. We also value how theatre and performance are increasingly engaging with communities, and make sure this is a key part of your professional training.

MAKING FILM AND TELEVISION

Our film and television students learn through practice right from the start. You'll develop key skills – such as writing, cinematography, sound and editing – as you explore and engage with different techniques and debates, and may choose to specialise in a particular area of practice towards the end of your degree. More than ever, the industry recognises the importance of accessibility, sustainability and social engagement, and these are at the heart of our teaching.

Whatever you study here, you'll go on a creative journey – and leave with a CV to reflect that.

PRACTICAL SKILLS

"I had a fantastic time studying in the Department of Film, Theatre & Television; all the tutors are passionate about their subjects and I had a lot of fun learning from them."

Rhianna Dhillon

English Literature with Film & Theatre graduate,
Freelance film critic and presenter at BAFTA

YOUR CREATIVE FUTURE

Minghella Studios can be your launchpad for a career in the creative industries.

As well as practical projects and critical study, each programme has built-in careers preparation. Our optional placement module is designed around the creative roles you want to enter. Employment skills are embedded in all our modules across all our degree programmes.

You'll learn about writing job applications, preparing for interviews, and how to present yourself for graduate opportunities in the creative industries. And with work experience and networking opportunities, all through your degree you'll have contact with lecturers and visiting practitioners who support you in building a professional identity. Students of ours become runners, cinematographers, producers, theatre administrators, directors and scriptwriters – to name just some of the pathways which open up.

You'll also benefit from a wide range of industry partnerships to support that process. Our unique links to the Shinfield Studios, in Reading, will bring Film & Television students contemporary knowledge of screen working practices. And our partnership with South Street Arts Centre and other theatre venues in Reading, enable Theatre & Performance students to engage with the development work of emerging artists and companies.

After you graduate, we'll continue to support you. On our online alumni network, we share opportunities, celebrate creative achievements and encourage collaborations. We continue to support your creative work, with students returning to Minghella Studios as professionals to showcase their work and act as mentors.
